BALANCED NEWS, FEARLESS VIEWS

THE FACE THAT CHANGED THE COURSE OF HISTORY The transformation of Corazon Cojuangco Aquino from "plain housewife" newly arrived from Boston (photo at right) started on Aug. 21, 1983, the assassination of her husband Ninoy Aquino, the political nemesis of the dictator Ferdinand Marcos. The contagion of Ninoy's courage spread throughout the nation. And "The Cory" speaking at rally after indignation rally, this one (above) on Ninoy's birthday on Nov. 27, led to a clamor for her to run against Marcos in a "snap election." The rest is her history as an icon of democracy and of nonviolent revolution. President Aquino and his siblings will observe her 3rd death anniversary today in private starting with Mass at Manila Memorial Park at 10 a.m. At 5 p.m., the Aquino family is scheduled to unveil a mini exhibit at the Edsa Shrine. Showdown on RH bill up

CBCP: 140 congressmen back Church stand

THE NAME of the game is numbers and the bishops are confident they have it wrapped up.

The Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines (CBCP) said the reproductive health (RH) bill will not pass the House of Representatives when it takes a vote on the measure on Aug. 7.

CBCP president Jose Palma yesterday said the bishops expected victory in their fight against the RH bill, counting 140 congressmen opposing the measure and only 49 favoring it.

Antipolo Bishop Gabriel Reyes said the CBCP leadership recently asked its members to talk to their district representatives about their position on the bill, which seeks universal reproductive health care in the Philippines.

The results of the survey and discussions in the country's 85 dioceses showed that lawmakers were against the bill, Reyes said.

Of the 85 dioceses, "77 answered," Reyes said. "In these 77 dioceses, there are 215 congressmen."

"Of the 215 congressmen surveyed by the bishops themselves, only 49 will vote yes to the RH bill, 140 will vote no to the RH bill and 26 are undecided. We are happy about that and we hope that they will not change their minds," he added.

Hazing kills another San Beda law student

By Philip C. Tubeza and Nancy C. Carvajal in Manila and Maricar Cinco, Inquirer Southern Luzon

THE DREAMS of a freshman law student of San Beda College abruptly, violently ended on a farm in Dasmariñas City.

Mark Andrei Marcos was the latest fatality in an apparent case of fraternity hazing.

Police said the bruised body of Marcos, 21, was brought to De La Salle University Medical Center in Dasmariñas City, Cavite province, at 10:30 p.m. on Sunday by two men.

PH first Olympic victory: Barriga zaps Italian, reaches round of 16

By Artemio T. Engracia Jr., News Editor and Ted S. Melendres, Sports Editor

LONDON—Light flyweight Mark Anthony Barriga scored the Philippines' first victory in the London Olympics on Tuesday outpointing Italy's taller Manuel Cappai in the first round of the boxing competitions at the ExCel Arena.

The 19-year-old Barriga repeatedly scored left straights and combinations, counterpunching most of the time to score a lopsided 17-7 victory over the taller Italian to reach the round of 16 in the men's 49 kg (light flyweight) division.

Barriga set the tone of the fight by knocking down the Italian in the first round and later jarred him with a wicked left to the face that prompted the referee to give Cappai a standing count.

The first round ended with the Filipino leading at 5-2.

"He showed a lot of courage and wasn't intimidated by the height of his foe," said Barriga's

Gov't accepts 4 more oil exploration offers

By Amy R. Remo

THE DEPARTMENT of Energy (DOE) yesterday received and accepted four offers to explore oil and gas in three areas of the West Philippine Sea (South China Sea), two of which were in waters also claimed by China.

Energy Undersecretary Jose Layug said two of the offers came from Nido Petroleum and Gas Corp. for Areas 3 and 4, one offer from a consortium composed of PNOC Exploration Corp., Philex Petroleum and PetroEnergy Resources for Area 4; and another offer from a consortium composed of London-based Pitkin Petroleum and PhilodrilI for Area 5.

BOC scores, takes over ₱450-M smuggled rice

By Robert Gonzaga, Inquirer Central Luzon

SUBIC BAY FREEPORT—The Bureau of Customs (BOC) has made formal seizure of what it calls its "biggest smuggled rice haul": Some 420,000 50-kilogram bags of Indian white rice that were abandoned in early April here.

Customs Commissioner Ruffy Biazon yesterday joined officials of Subic Bay Freeport (SBF) in inspecting the smuggled rice shipment, which has an estimated market value of P450 million.

As the BOC seized the shipments, lawyers of the consignee asked the bureau to lift its seizure and detention order.

Biazon said "there was clearly a grand design to illegally slip the 420,000 bags of imported white rice into the country as not only was the importation

Pag-ibig cuts interest on housing loans

Ex-poll exec Vicente de Lima; 83

IRIGA CITY—Former Election Commissioner Vicente de Lima Sr., father of Justice Secretary Leila de Lima, died Monday at home in Sta. Teresita, Iriga City. He was 83.

Caroline de Lima, the third of four children of the late Commission on Elections official, said their father died of colon cancer after undergoing an operation last year and suffering aggravated ailments.

She recalled that their father, who was a Comelec commissioner from 1991 to 1995 during the administration of President Corazon Aquino, had once said that he "belonged to a Comelec that knows how to count."

Caroline said their father was executive director of the Comelec before being appointed commissioner. Before that, he was a member of the Camarines Sur provincial board and a practicing lawyer.

De Lima is survived by his wife Norma, children Leila, Vicente Jr., Caroline and Vicente II, and grandchildren Israel, Vincent Joshua and Vicente Manuel.

Secretary De Lima arrived in Iriga City at 5 a.m. Tuesday to attend the wake for her father and his funeral. —Juan Escandor Jr., Inquirer Southern Luzon

GLOBE ASIATIQUE-PAG-IBIG CONTROVERSY

Issue: Some alleged "victims" of Globe Asiatique have complained about double selling of units.

The Truth: There could never be a double selling. What these alleged victims have is a mere promise to sell, more known as Contract to Sell (CTS), and not Deed of Absolute Sale because they have not yet fully paid the full purchase price of the condominium units which they proposed to buy from Globe Asiatique at GA Tower 2.

There never was a transfer of ownership as all the titles to the condominium units are still in the name of Globe Asiatique, thus clearly there was no double sale to speak of. Ownership of a unit does not transfer in a Contract to Sell.

Issue: The condominium units are allegedly previously mortgaged by Globe Asiatique to different sets of buyers.

The Truth: No such mortgage exists because what has been assigned by Globe Asiatique to Pag-IBIG were only the receivables from the contracts to sell that it has with its buyers.

The delivery of the titles to Pag-IBIG by Globe Asiatique is nothing more than a gesture of good faith that it will buy back defaulting accounts. The titles were thus delivered to Pag-IBIG only for safe-keeping as the real security for the loans are the assigned receivables themselves.

Issue: Buyers complained about not being able to pay their monthly amortizations to Pag-IBIG.

The Truth: The housing agency has advised buyers not to pay anymore to Globe Asiatique yet it is not accepting their payments. When referred by Globe Asiatique to pay their monthly amortizations directly to Pag-IBIG being the replacement buyers of those defaulting buyers whose contracts to sell were already notarially cancelled, Pag-IBIG refused to accept their payments.

The alleged complainants and Pag-IBIG officers themselves openly admitted that Pag-IBIG has been refusing to accept the monthly amortization payments of replacement buyers in the different projects of Globe Asiatique.

Several buyers of the projects of Globe Asiatique who were affected by Pag-IBIG's refusal to accept their monthly amortization payments have directly filed a petition for consignation with the regional office of the Housing and Land Use Regulatory Board (HLURB) in Pampanga impleading Pag-IBIG as principal respondent. For the few fully-paid buyers, the remedy would be to file a case of recovery or replevin against Pag-IBIG for illegally withholding the release of titles.

Issue: Why is Pag-IBIG refusing to accept payments of condominium units or house-and-lot buyers of GA properties when it can legally accept the same?

The Truth: Globe Asiatique has replacement buyers but Pag-IBIG would not accept these. The truth is Pag-IBIG borrowers are not prejudiced in the transaction. The obligations of the borrowers who are Pag-IBIG members in the Xevera projects are sufficiently secured.

The titles to the houses and lots were delivered to Pag-IBIG by Globe Asiatique. The market value of the properties are actually greater than the corresponding loans, which means that Pag-IBIG can even earn income from these projects.

As to why Pag-IBIG refuses to accept the payments is a big puzzle especially that Pag-IBIG is not the owner of the money but the Pag-IBIG members.

Issue: Globe Asiatique allegedly defrauded Pag-IBIG and its members of over ₱7 billion.

The Truth: How can Globe Asiatique defraud these Pag-IBIG members when it is Pag-IBIG which approved the loans and certified them as their members, not Globe Asiatique. The company's role was only loan counselling and collection of payments which would be turned over to Pag-IBIG as contained in the agreement.

No less than the Makati Regional Trial Court (RTC) Branch 58 has ruled in its Jan 30, 2012 decision that Globe Asiatique has neither the power to approve Pag-IBIG Fund membership nor the authority to approve loan applications based on their MOA. If Pag-IBIG truly lost ₱7 billion in its transactions with GA, why is it that its counter-claim in the case it lost in the Makati Branch 58 was only ₱10 million?

Whatever losses that Pag-IBIG allegedly sustained is self-inflicted because it has been unjustifiably refusing to accept the monthly amortization payments of the replacements buyers of Globe Asiatique who are trying to pay Pag-IBIG directly for the housing loans.

Issue: What is Pag-IBIG's motive?

The Truth: Except for the few complainants whose charges against Globe Asiatique have no basis, buyers of Globe Asiatique properties are now comfortably living in fully developed projects of Globe Asiatique. The media can check this out.

Issue: Does Globe Asiatique really have billions of loans with Pag-IBIG?

The Truth: None. It is the Pag-IBIG members who obtained properties in the Xevera projects who have outstanding loans with the Pag-IBIG Fund. Pag-IBIG advanced to Globe Asiatique the debts of members who got properties from company projects. Globe Asiatique first built and developed these properties using its own funds before offering the same to Pag-IBIG members under legally-binding arrangements with Pag-IBIG.

Issue: Globe Asiatique is actually the loser in these various arrangements with Pag-IBIG.

The truth: True. Even though these borrowers are Pag-IBIG members and are not connected with Globe Asiatique whatsoever except as buyers of their properties, Globe Asiatique is required to act as guarantor of the borrowers. All the risks about the borrowers' possibility of defaulting in their monthly amortizations are covered by safety nets under Globe Asiatique's various agreements with Pag-IBIG. The safety nets include updating of payments of delinquent borrowers, replacement of defaulting buyers by Globe Asiatique, and off-setting of the payables to Pag-IBIG corresponding to the unpaid amortizations of the borrowers against the receivables of Globe Asiatique from Pag-IBIG from GA's retention monies, money in escrow, collection fees, and take-out proceeds. Globe Asiatique has ₱800 million in escrow fund with Pag-IBIG.

Issue: There are alleged ghost borrowers

The truth: It is not in the best interest of Globe Asiatique to invent borrowers or come up with fictitious borrowers since in the end it will be the one who will buy back these problematic loans from Pag-IBIG as provided under its agreement with the Fund.

Issue: Mr. Delfin Lee and 4 four others are facing arrest following arrest warrants issued by the Pampanga RTC Branch 42

The truth: The arrest warrants are defective and are now subject of an appeal. Mr. Lee has cited a 2009 en banc decision of the Supreme Court in Heirs of Piedad vs. Judge Estrera holding that a court like the RTC of San Fernando is prohibited by law to interfere with the decision of a co-equal court like the RTC of Makati under the doctrine of judicial stability. Globe Asiatique lawyers argue that when the RTC of San Fernando ruled on the probable cause issue for purposes of issuance of warrant of arrest, it directly interfered with the decision of the RTC of Makati in Civil Case No. 10-1120, and in effect reversed its decision by holding that Mr. Lee and the other accused are guilty of approving the loans of alleged fraudulent buyers.

Globe Asiatique likewise laments the issuance of the warrants of arrest despite the non-payment of the filing fees of approximately Php132 million by Pag-IBIG, a requirement before a court can acquire jurisdiction in estafa cases according to the en banc decision of the Supreme Court in the landmark case of Cabaero vs. Santos. Under Rule 141, Sections 21 and 22 of the Rules of Court, all Government Owned and Controlled Corporations like Pag-IBIG are required to pay the filing fees in estafa cases before they can be raffled.

Issue: Are the contracts of Globe Asiatique with Pag-IBIG different from other developers and therefore irregular?

The Truth: There was no irregularity in the contracts of Globe Asiatique with Pag-IBIG as they are the same contracts entered into by all of the 205 real estate developers who participated and are accredited in Pag-IBIG's housing programs.

Underwear yields illegal travel papers

By Jocelyn R. Uy

THE BUREAU of Immigration (BI) has intercepted two Filipino women who concealed their working visas and plane tickets in their underwear in an attempt to fly out to Lebanon despite a deployment ban to that country.

Immigration Commissioner Ricardo David Jr. said the mere act of hiding their visas was proof that they were victims of human trafficking.

"If you hide your visa, it proves that you are a victim of human trafficking and we will not allow you to leave," he said.

The bureau withheld the names of the two women as Republic Act No. 9208, or the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act of 2003, prohibits the disclosure of the names of human traffickers and their victims.

According to David, the two women were about to board a Philippine Airlines flight for Bangkok 12 days ago when they were stopped by the bureau's travel control and enforcement unit.

The women failed to deny they were going to work abroad but later admitted to officials that their final destination was Beirut, where they said there were jobs waiting for them.

The government has yet to lift a deployment ban it imposed on Lebanon for the latter's failure to comply with RA 10022, or the Migrant Workers and Overseas Filipinos Act of 1995. Lebanon has been tagged as "not safe country" for deployment under the law.

The total ban on the deployment of domestic workers to Lebanon was imposed in July 2007 in the midst of a violent confrontation between Lebanon and Israel. About 33,000 Filipinos were estimated to have been in the Middle East country then. However, the number has since jumped to some 50,000 with the continuing entry of undocumented Filipino workers.

The two Filipino women revealed they concealed their work visas and plane tickets to Lebanon in their underwear. They also cited their Lebanese employer as Rafi Antoine Abou Khalil, whom they claimed applied for their visas.

The case is being investigated by the Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking (Iacat), and those responsible for recruiting the two women would be arrested and prosecuted, said lawyer Ma. Antonette Mangrobang, BI acting intelligence chief.

RIO Tower highlights carnival vibe at The Capital Towers

The Rio Tower is making condo living a richer experience at The Capital Towers as the third of Federal Land's upscale residential development along E. Rodriguez Sr. Avenue, Quezon City promises a carefree and vibrant lifestyle in the tradition of one of the world's most festive cities.

Inspired by Brazil's most glamorous city of Rio de Janeiro, the Rio Tower replicates the celebratory mood of the famous carnival by giving homeowners and their relatives and friends continuous fun and excitement whether they are inside their luxurious condo unit or in the indoor and outdoor amenities.

"The Rio Tower, just like the Rio Carnival, is a symbol of people coming together and enjoying each other," according to Federal Land president, Alfred Ty.

Rio has its own amenities in the 7th floor that guarantee residents and guests zero boredom. The swimming pool and poolside deck brings out the resort-type spirit of Rio Tower by offering relaxation or serving as a party venue.

There's also a function room, which can accommodate a family gathering. Children can have fun all day at their own play area while adults can enjoy billiards and table tennis at the game room. Other first-class amenities are a jogging path, gym, daycare center, commercial arcade and a view deck.

Rio's 25- to 28-square-meter studio unit, 36- to 39-square-meter 1-bedroom unit, and 41- to 60-square-meter 2-bedroom unit are perfectly snug and functional for a budding family or professionals. Each Rio unit has a living and dining area and bedroom with laminated wood plank flooring while the kitchen and toilet and bathroom have ceramic tile floors.

At 40-storey's tall, the Rio Tower affords high zone residents a view of Antipolo in the east, Manila Bay in the west, northern Manila in the north and the Makati skyline in the south. There are four elevators to serve all residents. The building is also equipped with an automatic fire suppression system, fire detection alarm system, emergency power generator and sewage treatment plant.

Location enhances the Rio Tower's festive offerings with bar hopping and gig-watching options in the nightlife strip of nearby Tomas Morato and Timog Avenues. Shopaholics also have easy access to the Gateway and Ali Mall in Cubao and the Greenhills Shopping Center in San Juan. Everything else is near from hospitals to schools.

The Rio Tower will be the culmination of The Capital Towers, which comprises two other residential buildings perched on podiums: the Athens and Beijing. The Athens Tower has been completed while construction of the Beijing Tower is currently in full swing and is scheduled for completion by next year. The 35-storey Beijing Tower is also offering bigger units and the innovative myHOBS concept or units that can be converted into a home, an office or a shop.

The Rio Tower is scheduled for construction by mid-2012 and is targeted for completion in 2016, when Rio de Janeiro in Brazil hosts the 31st Olympics.

For more information about Rio Tower, please call 723-4153 or visit its website at www.thecapitaltowers.com.ph.

FOREIGN OBSERVERS' VIEW

Pinoy drivers push limits of space, skill

HOT ON the gas pedal, and fast on the tongue. That's how many foreigners seem to describe Filipino drivers and their street-smart ways. The latest visitor to concur with this observation has been Lexus Asia Pacific head Paul Carroll, who was in Manila July 23 for the launch of the all-new Lexus ES350.

When asked by Inquirer Motoring what he thought of drivers in Manila, Carroll said: "Their (command of the) English (language) is so good, it's easy to communicate here. They are pushy drivers [illegible] aggressive."

My other car is the Batmobile

BRUCE WAYNE (Christian Bale) isn't the only one who has to rise to the challenge in "The Dark Knight Rises." As the epic Batman trilogy draws to a close, Bruce's vehicles must also be of a level that moviegoers have not seen before. Lucius Fox (Morgan Freeman), Bruce's equivalent of James Bond's Q, has the Bat vehicles covered. Upgrades to the Batpod motorcycle and a new flying machine are in the cards. Meanwhile, for his more down to earth motoring requirements, relatively speaking of course, he once again turns to favored supplier Lamborghini.

In the "Dark Knight Rises," Bruce Wayne drives a Lamborghini Aventador LP700-4. With its menacing, bat proportioned stance, huge vents and louvers, swing-up doors, and visible V12 engine, it is not exactly a discreet car to use for surveillance. The LP700-4's chassis is constructed from carbon fiber, resulting in a curb weight of only 1575 kg. The carbon monocoque weighs in at 147.5 kg—light enough for Bane (Tom Hardy) to lift up and throw away. In combination with the 700-hp engine, the performance is astounding: 2.9 seconds from 0-100 kph, and top speed of 350 kph. Of all the cars in Bruce Wayne's garage, only the rocket-powered Batmobile may be able to top that. Returning foil Selina Kyle (Anne Hathaway) also gets to have some time with the Aventador, and despite her supposed affinity with the "99 percent," she can't help but have a big grin on her face.

Lamborghini has been a mainstay of Christopher Nolan's Batman movies. In the first installment, "Batman Begins," the Murcielago Roadster made its onscreen debut as Bruce Wayne makes [illegible] a hotel doorway with [illegible] two long-legged passengers on the front seat.

In "The Dark Knight," another Murcielago has a much more significant role. This time in the LP640 variant, Bruce uses the Murcielago to intercept an attempt on a character's life, sacrificing the car in the process. This may have been the most emotional moment of the movie for the car fans watching. The LP640 Coupe is powered by a 640-hp V12, and capable of more than 337 kph. As the Murcielago has been replaced by the Aventador as the flagship of the Lamborghini line, the concluding installment naturally uses its successor.

The best line about these cars comes from Alfred Pennyworth (Michael Caine), who, upon asking Bruce Wayne if he'd like to use the Batpod, gets the reply, "In the middle of the day Alfred? Not very subtle." Alfred replies with a grave deadpan expression, "The Lamborghini, then. Much more subtle."

THE TUMBLER

IN "THE Dark Knight Rises," Bruce Wayne drives a Lamborghini Aventador LP700-4.

"THE LAMBORGHINI, then. Much more subtle."

Bruce Wayne's choices for a substitute Batmobile

ONE OF the recurring plots against Bruce Wayne in the Christopher Nolan movies is that of antagonists trying to wrest control of Wayne Enterprises or to bankrupt him altogether. In that case, he may no longer have the unlimited resources of a billionaire playboy. He would still have some choices for a substitute Batmobile, by using one of these concept, or even (gasp!) stock vehicles:

BMW Gina. A concept car that shares technology with Batman's new suit. In "Batman Begins," Lucius Fox demonstrated fabric that can change shape when an electric current is run through them. The Gina Light Visionary Model features a flexible textile cover that stretches across a movable substructure. Like Batman's wings, individual functions are only revealed—headlights, for example, or a rear spoiler, if and when they are needed.

Maybach Exelero. A project study made by Maybach to explore high-speed performance, [illegible]. The Exelero is powered by a 700-hp V12 biturbo engine, with a torque of 1000 Nm. Top speed was clocked at 351 kph. With its mix of futuristic and retro styling cues, the Exelero may be more suited to the Batman of the Tim Burton era.

Ferrari P4/5. A one-off commission done by Ferrari stylist Pininfarina, the P4/5 is a Ferrari Enzo underneath but restyled to the tastes of customer James Glickenhaus. This is no simple reskin, but a thorough effort including wind tunnel testing to ensure that the Ferrari's dynamics remain superb.

Dodge Viper. Chrysler actually prepared some vehicles for "The Dark Knight Returns," but these were modified Chrysler 300 sedans. A much more appropriate choice would be the new Viper. While final specs are still under wraps, a V8 or V10 engine would probably be the engine of choice. And, as a bonus, it wouldn't hurt Bruce's image to buy American.

Lamborghini Sesto Elemento. Since the Italian company is already a preferred supplier, its Sesto Elemento concept may just fit the bill. Even more lightweight than the Aventador, it clocks in at just 999 kg, and uses a 570-hp V10 engine. The Sesto Elemento is named after the sixth element, carbon, which accounts for its light weight. With its stealth-fighter lines, it looks even more of a Batmobile than the Aventador. And yes, it does come in black.

FRENCH Ambassador Gilles Garachon

[illegible]

Fall of Bastille marked in tasteful French splendor

By Margo C. Enriquez
Contributor

WHEN THE French entertain, it's got to be simple but fresh.

That's the style the French Embassy has evolved through the years.

New French ambassador Gilles Garachon and wife Isabelle have revived the tradition of celebrating Bastille Day (the French National Day which commemorates the revolution on July 14, 1789) in the ambassador's residence.

(Many Filipinos remember this Forbes Park house as the home of the late socialite Elvira Manahan who hosted some of the most memorable parties in Manila. Her family sold it some time ago.)

Tents were set up around the pool with three drapes of red, white and blue—colors of the French flag and, coincidentally, the Philippine flag.

Inside the house, [illegible] pyramids served as cocktail tables. As guests streamed in, a French musician played the accordion against a background of Moet & Chandon champagnes.

The guests were from the academe, the diplomatic corps, and culture and the arts. Beauty queens such as Miss World Philippines Gwen Ruais and her mother, ex-model Mala, and singer It Girl Solenn Heussaff, with dad Louis, were among the young guests.

The best part was that Dennis [illegible], the [illegible] president of Alliance Française (AF), came to support the event even if that meant being in the same room as the AF officials. After all, the Garachons are a likeable couple, and the ambassador's agenda is to strengthen the cultural ties between the Philippines and France.

The event began with a baritone singing "Lupang Hinirang" and a soprano rendering "La Marseillaise" in perfect French. In his speech, Ambassador Garachon talked about the ideals of Bastille or the French Revolution—liberty, equality and fraternity—also the spirit of the Edsa Revolution.

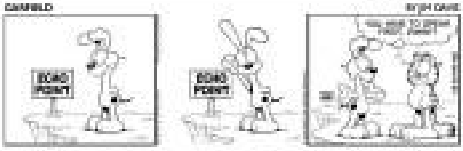

Dessert stations in the living and dining areas made reference to Paris, created by the Makati Shangri-La team.

The centerpiece was a facsimile of the Eiffel Tower, with the French flag colors of red, white and blue macarons. A tower of croquembouche, a traditional French dessert made of cream profiteroles and
